IN JOBBING CIRCLES.

Much Rain Has Its Effect on the Weather. A Bad Effect on the According to the best information obtainable, the past week was not a decidedly active one in the jobbing and wholesaling circles. And it is all attributable to the much wetness and the too much rain.

The produce and commission men, the majority of whom do business down on Cary Street, say the continued leaky clouds have made business rather cloudy for them. This is predominantly the fruit and berry season, and because of the continued rains these goods reach Cary Street in a rather damp and bedraggled condition.
This naturally requires the cutting of the prices, and in some instances absolutely knocks out all hopes of making satisfactory sales, that is sales that can be encouraging to the berry and fruit growers.

Other Goods Are Active.
The wholesale grocers have no special complaints to make, but they do say that the heavy rains that seem so hard to come to a stopping point have had a bad effect on business.

The dry goods and shoe jobbers, as well as the hat and millinery dealers, attribute a dull week's business almost entirely to unfavorable weather conditions. And some of the building material dealers report good business in spite of rain and the clouds.
A wholesaler who buttoned-holed the Times-Dispatch man yesterday said: "I spent three days of this week in North Carolina looking after trade conditions. I visited a number of dealers and had to use an umbrella and a raincoat all of the time. I found the buyers who trade on the Richmond market rather blue, very blue, and all on account of the weather. With the cotton plants almost swimming in water and the tobacco plants looking like pond lilies in the Dismal Swamp, and the heavy clouds that talked business. In fact, they would not talk at all. But all the same the rains can't last forever, and when the sun begins to shine with its usual summer vigor, trade will pick up all right enough." This Richmond jobber was not altogether blue, but he realized the fact that weather conditions have made the jobbing business dull for the time being.
